COOPER CITY ELEMENTARY

Happy Tuesday!

We hope your week is off to a great start. In today's update you'll find the latest i-Ready instructional usage for your school, answers to some of the most common concerns about usage, and a quick spotlight on a member of our team.

True or False?

We often hear from educators with questions about time on task and pass rates in i-Ready. We've addressed a few of the most common misconceptions and concerns below.

1. All lessons count toward student's time on task – i-Ready-assigned and teacher-assigned.
    TRUE. Rest assured, whether students are working in their personalized paths, or in a teacher-assigned lesson targeting specific skills, time spent actively working in any lesson counts toward instruction time for the week.

2. Time spent on Standards Mastery Checks is included in online instruction time.
    FALSE. Only i-Ready lessons count in instruction time. Diagnostic, Standards Mastery and Growth Monitoring assessments are never included in instructional usage.

3. Lesson Pass Rates are an average of students' scores on their lesson quizzes.
    FALSE. Passing rates, also called % of Lessons Passed in the new class and student reports, are based on number of lessons passed divided by the number of completed lessons. When student pass rates dip below 70%, this is a strong indicator that students are struggling and require teacher intervention.

    Teachers should monitor Online Instruction weekly. Our Monitoring Online Instruction Worksheet will help teachers monitor progress through our Online Instruction (Class) report and Online Instruction (Student) report.

Leaders can find more information about our usage recommendations and supporting teachers in our Monitoring Online Instruction FAQ.

Team Trivia!

The i-Ready & Ready Implementation Team supports you in many ways – from answering questions about i-Ready and the Teacher Toolbox to delivering on-site support, and more. This week, get to know our fearless PD leader!
